The curriculum that is covered in school as well as material covered in STEMulations will be reinforced when program youth receive hands-on experiences applying what they have learned in school to work activities. Students will be shown how STEM subjects relate to jobs in one or more of the following industry clusters: manufacturing; health care; transportation; distribution and logistics; information technology; finance; and green technology. Most importantly, youth will be shown that they can succeed in training for jobs in these industries. STEMulations, a collaborative effort between Rock Valley College, Boone County high schools and area employers, has three interconnected components. The first component is based on the Upward Bound College Preparation program and will offer participants tutoring, supplemental instruction in academic areas, career and college counseling, mentoring, internships and college visits. The second component is the Upward Bound model's collaborative learning program in which students are formed into work teams that problem-solve: the teams will design/engineer/produce a product and develop manufacturing and marketing plans for the product they invent. The third component is the culmination of the academic and "inventions" component: the teams will work with secondary and post-secondary faculty as they
